Economic Growth

How it works and how it transformed the world
by Edward A. Hudson

Book summary

Economic Growth offers a new view of growth, unique in its combination of historical depth, intellectual clarity and practical relevance. Replete with figures and formal yet accessible treatment, its original insights will interest academic and professional economists, while its comprehensive coverage and lucid explanations make it an excellent guidebook for anyone interested in economic growth.

Praise

"A valuable synthesis of literature on the sources of economic growth [...]"

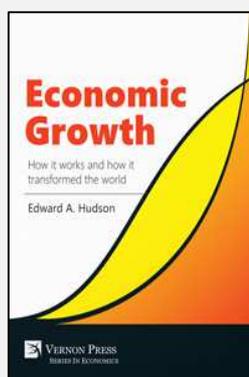

Diego Comin, Dartmouth College

"...meticulous and balanced development of evidence on the causes and consequences of growth."

Laurence M. Ball, John Hopkins University and NBER

About the author

Ed Hudson (PhD, Harvard), working with Prof. Dale Jorgenson (Harvard University), pioneered computable general equilibrium models in the 1970s. Ed then moved to strategy consulting, advising corporates and governments in the United States and New Zealand. He has now returned to researching and writing on economic growth.

The Challenge of Credit Supply

American Problems and Solutions 1650-1950
by Michael Anthony Kirsch

A deep yet and accessible treatment of the most pivotal financial and monetary policies throughout American history (1650-1950), with a particular emphasis on how and why these policies facilitated the supply of adequate credit for economic development. Its extensive use of primary sources, period literature, and carefully chosen quotations allows the reader to participate in the original discussion and issues that faced Americans in each era. This vivid account leads to a unique grasp of relationships between essential facts, ideas, and time periods.

Understanding DSGE models

Theory and Applications

by Celso Jose Costa

Book summary

This book strives to present Dynamic Stochastic General Equilibrium models in a detailed manner, intended to walk readers through this otherwise daunting process. By showcasing concrete applications, it aims to persuade incipient researchers to work with this methodology.

Praise

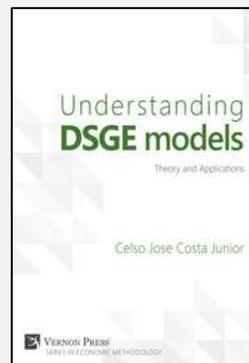

[...] an indispensable book for the advanced Econ undergraduate, graduate, and for any researcher [...] makes a major contribution to the learning process of this kind of macroeconomic models."

Alejandro C. García Cintado,
Dept. of Economics, Universidad Pablo Olavide

"This book teaches DSGE models from scratch"

Stock-Flow-Consistent Models and Institutional Variety

by Romar Correa and Amelia Correa

General equilibrium (anti-general equilibrium) tends to be strong on technique (critique) but weak when it comes to recommending non-trivial policy. Most macroeconomists tend to think in closed-economy terms, the 'foreign' being the mirror of 'home'. What might be the connections between two institutionally varied economies that are thrown together by the dynamics of globalization?

Networks of International Trade and Investment

by Sara Gorgoni et al. (eds.)

The globalisation of industries in recent decades has led to a fundamental change in the way in which production is structured. The integration of global trade has brought a disintegration of production. Understanding the interdependencies between entities involved in fragmented production is essential. Traditional methods and statistical approaches are insufficient to address this challenge. This edited book makes a case for network analysis to be used alongside existing techniques.

Technological Innovation Index

A novel innovation indicator and its implications for technology evaluation

by Frederick Pachys

Not all innovations are equal. Though recent economic literature on the evaluation of technological change acknowledges this reality, actual evaluation methods suffer from numerous limitations. Technological Innovation Index uses patent citation analysis to highlight the enormous variation in the characteristics, importance and evolution of technology over time and outlines a set of sophisticated tools for its analysis.

Politics and Web 2.0

The Participation Gap

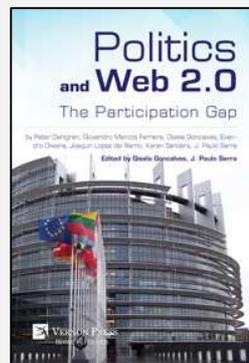

by Gisela Gonçalves, J. Paulo Serra et al.

Book summary

The ambition is to stimulate debate around the party-citizen "participation mismatch" and the role and place of modern web technologies in this setting. Each of the included chapters provide valuable explorations of the ways in which political parties motivate, make use of and are shaped by citizen participation in the Web 2.0 era. Diverse perspectives are employed, drawing examples from several European political systems and offering analytical insights at both the individual/micro level and at broader, macro or inter-societal systems level. Taken together, they offer a balanced and thought-provoking account of the political participation gap, its causes and consequences for political communication and democratic politics, as well as pointing the way to new forms of contemporary political participation.

About the author

Gisela Gonçalves is Professor and Head of the Department of Communication and Arts of the University of Beira Interior (UBI, Covilhã, Portugal). She develops her research activity at LabCom.IFP. Her current research interests are Public Relations Theories, Communication Ethics and Government Communication.

The Great Illusion

New Edition

by Norman Angell

International trade and the development of intertwined global markets makes inter-state war less profitable and probable. This is Norman Angell's simple hypothesis, vigorously defended in The Great Illusion and at the root of an enduring controversy, from the time of its initial publication - on the eve of the First World War - to this day. Well documented, logically argued and persuasive, it is a passionate defense of peace, attacking widely held assumptions about the gains from war and the costs of conquest.

Care and Well-being in Old Age

Investigating older people's involvement with an ethic of care by Marian Barnes et al.

Book summary

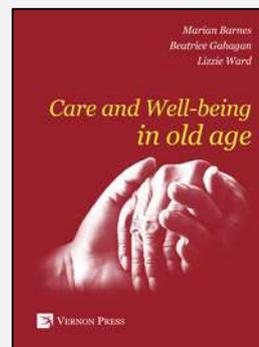

This book seeks to understand what well-being means to older people, and to influence the practice of those who work with older people. Theoretically, the authors drew from work in critical gerontology which seeks to understand how experiences of ageing are shaped by social, economic, cultural and political contexts. We draw on a broad body of work which challenges normative assumptions of 'successful' ageing, particularly as it has been constructed through neo-liberal policy constructions of 'active ageing'. We also applied insights of feminist ethics of care. This is based in a relational ontology that challenges neo-liberal assumptions of autonomous individualism.

About the authors

Marian Barnes is Emeritus Professor of Social Policy at the University of Brighton.

Beatrice Gahagan is Health and Wellbeing Development Manager at Age UK Brighton and Hove.

Lizzie Ward is a senior research fellow in the School of Applied Social Science at the University of Brighton.

The Road to Parnassus

Artist Strategies in Contemporary Art
by Diego Mantoan

How can one become a successful artist? Where should one start a career in the art world? What are useful strategies to achieve recognition in the art system? Such questions hoard in students' minds ever since entering art school and they probably chase every kind of art professional who is at an early career stage. "The Road to Parnassus" tries to understand what makes a good start in today's art world, who are influential players in the field and which strategies might apply.

Art Movements and The Discourse of Acknowledgements and Distinctions

by Themba Tsotsi

The book examines the location of visual art practice and art movements in the context of modernity and explicates the measure with which they can be characterized as what the postcolonial discourse of acknowledgements and distinctions terms hysteridentical. It argues that visual art practice and art movements exhibit in the context of Modernity the measure with which 'signs' are imbued or inculcated as 'negative' formative and didactic facilities.

Modernity, Civilization and the Return to History

by Anthony F. Shaker

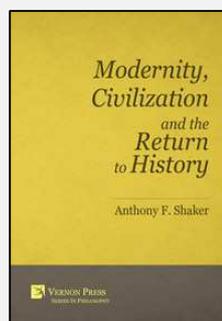

Book summary

The modern concept and study of civilization have their roots, not in western Europe, but in the long tradition of scientific and philosophic inquiry that began in a self-conscious Islamicate civilization. They emerged—as Heidegger would say—within a “region of being” proper to systematic science. Western European thought has introduced new elements that have completely altered how collective and personal identities are conceived and experienced.

Yet, the world has been globalized for at least a millennium, a fact partially obscured by the threadbare but widespread belief that modernity is a product of something called the West. One is thus justified in asking, as many people do today, if humanity has not lost its initiative.

About the author

Anthony F. Shaker is a philosopher, scholar of Islamic thought/civilization, and analyst of social theory. He has authored numerous articles and books, including the only complete study of Ṣadr al-Dīn Qūnawī's thought (d.1274 CE) and two translated volumes of Ghazālī's Ihyā' al-'ulūm. He obtained his doctorate from McGill University, Canada.

Self, History and Future

by Tetsuaki Iwamoto

The essay is based on a holistic and dynamic concept with logical progressions. Instead of capturing movements as a still picture the author tries to record constantly changing situations in terms of modality of history. It is the necessity of tangencies and encompassments for Circles of Identity (CI) that forms history. The momentum of 'self' that bridges the past and the future is the propellant of CIs, which follows certain rules to suggest our destiny.

New Perspectives in the Philosophy of Persons
by James Beauregard et al.

The authors in this collection do not simply reflect the ‘personalism’, they put it to work on a range of philosophical and theological problems, both classical and contemporary; problems of free will, personal identity, and the nature of reality, as well as the very current concerns of environmental philosophers, bio- and neuro-ethicists. Their perspectives, too, are many and varied, so offer profound insights into key debates among other philosophical traditions.

Persons, Institutions, and Trust

Essays in Honor of Thomas O. Buford
by James M. McLachlan et al.

The papers presented in this volume honor Thomas O. Buford (a pre-eminent voice of forth generation Personalism, and Boston Personalism in particular). Personalism is a school of philosophical and theological thought which holds that the ideas of “person” and “personality” are indispensable both to an adequate understanding of all metaphysical and epistemological problems, and the key to an adequate theory of ethical and political human interaction.

The Common Good

An introduction to personalist philosophy
by Jonas Norgaard Mortensen

Personalism has been greatly neglected in Western political thought. In this book, Jonas Norgaard Mortensen attempts to introduce personalism while simultaneously demonstrating its historical origins, acquainting the reader with its thinkers and those who have practiced it, and showing that personalism has a highly relevant contribution to make in the debate about the most pressing social and political developments of our age.

Darwin's Incomplete Idea

by Gunnar Odhner

Why is progress in environmental protection slow and faltering? Is it because we misunderstand our place in nature? This book argues that it is the normative implications of Darwinism and their powerful grip on collective social consciousness that are partly responsible for the tardiness. It should be of interest to philosophers of language and social scientists concerned about the environment and our place in it.

The Impact Of Reason On Faith, Ethics And Belief by Geran F. Dodson

The purpose of the book is to examine the theological claims of ethics, faith and belief from a philosophical perspective. The Abrahamic and Mosaic covenants of the Old Testament, Jesus of the synoptic gospels, and Paul's writings serve as the frame of reference in examining a biblical expression of reason and structured logic. Logic in scripture employs propositions based primarily on revealed proof that is within the context of that which cannot be proven absolutely.

Intervention or Protest Acting for non-human animals by Andrew Woodhall et al.

Individuals, groups, advocacy agencies, and governments have all espoused competing ideas for how we should approach nonhuman use and exploitation. Ought we proceed through liberation? Abolition? Segregation? Integration? As nonhuman liberation, welfare, and rights' groups increasingly interconnect and identify with other 'social justice movements', resolutions to these questions have become increasingly entangled with questions on justice and our ethical commitments.

Einstein for Anyone: A Quick Read

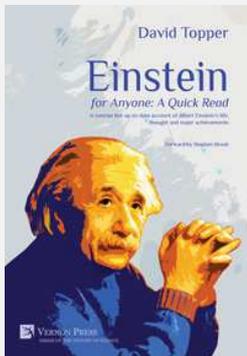

A concise but up-to-date account of Albert Einstein's life, thought and major achievements

by David Topper

Here is the compact story of this famous man, from the smiling contrarian in his grade school picture to the nonconformist adult who refused to groom his hair. As such, it fills a gap: the need for a short book on Einstein with a brief but up-to-date story of his life and thought and contributions.

"[...] a fascinating introduction to Einstein's career and scientific achievements."

Rethinking the Core Texts in Liberal Arts & Sciences Education in Europe

by Emma Cohen de Lara, Hanke Drop

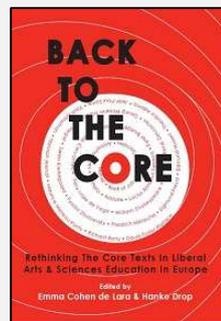

Book summary

This edited volume fills a gap in the literature by providing reflections on the recent developments in Europe with regard to higher education in the liberal arts and sciences. The first section includes reflections from either side of the Atlantic about the nature and aims of liberal arts and sciences education and the way in which it takes shape, or should take shape in European institutions of higher learning and takes as a distinct approach to liberal arts and sciences education by focusing on the unique way in which core texts – i.e. classic texts from philosophical, historical, literary or cultural traditions involving “the best that has been written” – meet the challenges of modern higher education in general and in Europe in particular.

About the authors

Emma Cohen de Lara PhD, is assistant professor in political theory at Amsterdam University College.

Hanke Drop works in the field of teaching liberal arts values to students of educational leadership studies, as well as in the field of Arts education & research.

Questioning History

16 Essential Questions That Will Deepen Your Understanding of the Past

by Joe Regenbogen

Since the days of the Ancient Greeks, history has been perceived as the academic study of the past. Unfortunately, it has generally been taught as a litany of rigid, boring facts intended to be accepted rather than questioned. Questioning History is a book built around 16 essential questions designed to challenge this common assumption. The best way to learn and to appreciate a subject is through active engagement. Questioning History provides a shot of adrenalin to the study of history.

Understanding Core French Grammar

by Andrew J. Betts

Book summary

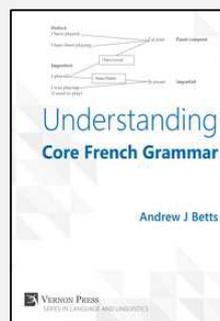

This book contains an explanatory treatment of the core areas of difficulty for the English speaking learner of French. It deals with the key issues in tense formation and use and verbal structures and processes such as negation, passives and subjunctives along with a highly exemplified treatment of pronouns and a section dealing with adjectives and other elements of the grammar.

"This lucid, accessible and user-friendly book fills an unfortunate gap in the literature on French grammar."

Neil Smith, Emeritus Professor of Linguistics at University College London.

About the author

Andrew Betts is currently Registrar at Lancing College, England. He holds a BA in English Language with Medieval Literature from Durham University, a Postgraduate Diploma in Linguistics from UCL, a Postgraduate Diploma in French translation from the Institute of Linguists and a PhD in German Linguistics, German Impersonal Passives from UCL.

Wordscapes: Explorations in English Language

by Robert Tompkins

Wordscapes investigates the biology of words. Whether used as tools or weapons, words are humankind's most significant and most potent invention. We have given words a morality, a sociology, and a psychology. Words induce laughter, incite anger, instill hope, inflict pain, and inspire love. We use words to heal, motivate, manipulate, and deceive. They haunt and taunt; amuse and bemuse. Because of their power, words and the uses to which we put them, warrant the scrutiny given in Wordscapes.

Teaching students to talk a foreign language: Usage-Based Instruction

by Serafima Gettys

This book is about Usage-Based Instruction, an innovative approach to teaching students to orally communicate in foreign languages. Students taught by the UBI demonstrate higher language gain, better pronunciation and grammatical accuracy, as well as more ease in expressing their ideas in the foreign language than those taught by more traditional, usually textbook-driven, methods.

Call for Book Proposals: New Series in Complex Social Systems

Vernon Press, an independent publisher committed to excellence in scholarship, is inviting book proposals for a new series in Complex Social Systems. At this early stage the scope is necessarily broad and could accommodate formal approaches to the study of complexity from across the social sciences, including computational sociology, complexity economics and system dynamics. We would particularly welcome proposals for books that seek to introduce complex systems perspectives, approaches and methods to advanced postgraduates, professionals and new researchers to the field. We expect to launch the first titles in 2016 and maintain a publication schedule of 2-4 titles a year.

What we look for in a new book proposal

- The book should be the product of original research and scholarship. It may reflect an original idea or the application of an existing idea to a new setting. Alternatively, it may draw from and unite existing approaches into a comprehensive whole, resulting in a volume suitable for reference or student instruction.
- It should be in an area in which you are an expert in courtesy of extensive study, research and/or professional experience. It should be of a sufficiently high academic standard to stand the test of peer review.
- It should strive to make a contribution to the field, enlarge upon existing research, or fill a market niche. In all cases, it should be of interest to a sufficiently large community of researchers and practitioners to justify publication in book format.

Sample Topics

- Adaptive systems
- System dynamics and modelling
- Agent-based modelling, Microsimulation
- Novel data collection tools and methods
- Big Data, Content analysis
- Social network theory / analysis
- Complex networks, Network design
- Emergence, philosophy of complexity
- Policy implications of complexity

Submission procedure

Please send a short book proposal (5 pages maximum) or extended abstract to info@vernonpress.com. To speed up initial screening, you may include a sample chapter, the full list of references and a list of your other academic publications or a brief biographical note. If your proposal interests us we will proceed with peer review. For more information see www.vernonpress.com/publish

Publish with us

We welcome academic book proposals from both experienced and first time authors. Feel free to drop us a line at info@vernonpress.com with an outline of your proposal. If it interests us we will invite you to submit a full proposal (see our website for instructions) or full manuscript for editorial assessment and, subsequently, peer review.

Editorial values and standards

Our acquisition process has as its central criterion the contribution of a work to knowledge, irrespective of approach or perspective. It is necessary for such a contribution to be scientifically rigorous and of current interest to the academic communities to which it belongs, but saleability is not as central to our commitment to scholarship as has widely become the case over the last few years. Peer-review and close collaboration with information specialists, academic associations and other research communities ensure our titles are relevant and of a high academic standard.

Quality commitment

We employ rigorous quality control processes in commissioning, production and distribution. Our production editors adopt a pragmatic approach to turning around a manuscript quickly and with only the necessary intervention, and given the current state of academic publishing, are keen to be cost-effective without compromising on quality. In keeping with our commitment to high quality, we use a mix of technologies to achieve excellent printing standards and durable hardback binding.

What our authors say about us

“[...] my heartfelt congratulations on a job well done. I think you and your team have done a fabulous job”

“An excellent job has been done by your Press in bringing out this book. My compliments to you and your associates.”

“It has been a thrill to have such an attentive publisher take notice of my work. They have been consummate professionals.”

Maximum exposure

We take marketing seriously and make use of the latest digital media in addition to more traditional approaches. We are ready to work with authors in promotional activities including book launch seminars, conference presentations and, where relevant, major press reviews. All titles are indexed in the major scholarly book repositories and made available through a wide range of distribution channels including academic libraries and of course online retailers such as Amazon. We are currently working to make our titles available in a greater range of formats.

No cost burden & flexibility about open access

We never charge authors for production costs. Our no-charge promise reflects our confidence in commissioning only high quality works and the efficiency of our production and distribution channels. Authors can elect to make their work available (partly or in full) and indexed in open access repositories.

Individual attention

Being a small business we care for and pay attention to the needs of each of our authors. We work closely with authors at all stages and can accommodate individual needs in editing, typesetting, visual reproduction, translation, marketing and distribution.

How to publish with us

Please send a short book proposal (5 pages maximum) or abstract to info@vernonpress.com. To speed up initial screening, you may include a sample chapter, the full list of references, and a list of your other academic publications or a brief biographical note. If your proposal interests us we will then proceed with full review to establish the originality, rigor and potential impact of your work.
