

Resilience and the Wandering Subject

Edited by

Supriya Daniel

IIT Bombay

Anu Kuriakose

NIT, Trichy

Series in Literary Studies

VERNON PRESS

Copyright © 2024 by the Authors.

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or otherwise, without the prior permission of Vernon Art and Science Inc.
www.vernonpress.com

In the Americas:
Vernon Press
1000 N West Street, Suite 1200,
Wilmington, Delaware 19801
United States

In the rest of the world:
Vernon Press
C/Sancti Espiritu 17,
Malaga, 29006
Spain

Series in Literary Studies

Library of Congress Control Number: 2024938414

ISBN: 979-8-8819-0035-9

Product and company names mentioned in this work are the trademarks of their respective owners. While every care has been taken in preparing this work, neither the authors nor Vernon Art and Science Inc. may be held responsible for any loss or damage caused or alleged to be caused directly or indirectly by the information contained in it.

Every effort has been made to trace all copyright holders, but if any have been inadvertently overlooked the publisher will be pleased to include any necessary credits in any subsequent reprint or edition.

Cover design by Vernon Press. Image by Anirban Bose.

Contents

Introduction	v
Supriya Daniel IIT Bombay
Chapter 1
Women Walking the City: Analysing the Wandering Subject in Amrita Mahale's Milk Teeth	1
Namrata Nirmal IIT Madras, India
Merin Simi Raj IIT Madras, India
Chapter 2
Home(in)g the Hostland: Provincializing Metropolitan Cities of Refuge in Sethu's The Saga of Muziris	15
Jintu Alias SRM University AP, India
Chapter 3
In Search of a Home: A Queer Hero's Quest to Belong	29
Aleena Achamma Paul IIT Ropar, India
Chapter 4
Carrying the Fire: The Road and Rituals of Resilience in a Dead World	41
Sakti Sekhar Dash Social Science Research Council, Open Association of Research Society
Chapter 5
'Masi': The Wandering Subject in "Wake Up Call" in Barbed Wire Fence (2015)	55
Jabeen Yasmeen IIT Bombay

Chapter 6
Construction of Maternal/ Womb Space and Her-Story in Andrea Levy's Small Island	67
Ijeoma Odoh Princeton University
Chapter 7
Resilience as a Form of Contestation in the Poetry of John Clare	95
Anindita Chatterjee Durgapur Government College, West Bengal, India
Chapter 8
Mise en Abîme: A Strategy that Highlights a Wandering, Fluid Subjectivity in Abdallah Laroui's novel 'Awrāq: Sīrat Idrīs al-dhihniyyah	109
Anouar El Younssi Oxford College of Emory University
Acknowledgements	125
Contributors	127
Index	131

Introduction

Supriya Daniel

IIT Bombay

Finally, all these present struggles revolve around the question, Who are we? (Foucault 781)

Any investigation into “Who are we?” struggles to formulate an answer. This book “participates” (Derrida 65) in the quest to comprehend the essence of human beings from the two strands—“struggle” and “who”—which has been transliterated into resilience and subject/self/identity in the chapters that follow.¹ Resilience or “positive adaptation despite adversity” (Fleming and Ledogar 2) is captured as one of the forces that nudge the im/mobility of the subject and plays a pivotal part in the formation of identity.²

The formulation of the concept of the wandering subject that is reflected in this book emerges from my doctoral thesis, where the intention was to particularly analyse the ever-evolving and forming subject in contemporary novels from Africa. The context of extrapolating this concept of the subject was that the overriding Western thought, as criticized by Achille Mbembe, seems to depend on binaries that consequently give prominence to one as opposed to the other (2). So, either the self is markedly different and superior to the other, or the human is essentially rational and, therefore, not an animal. What happens when one does not inhabit the space of the subject as conceived by Western Enlightenment? How does one conceive what the human is when “the definition of what and who human was based on exclusion, so that the slave, the barbarian and the foreigner were ... figures of an animal in human form” (qtd. in Roos 67).³

¹ Jacques Derrida uses “participates” in the context of genres, “Every text participates in one or several genres” (65), in the sense that the text does not commit to one particular genre. Similarly, the concepts discussed in the book, while examines concepts of subject/self/identity, does not claim to belong to one absolute strand of thought not claim to carve a unique pathway, but explore a different paradigm to understand these fluid concepts.

² S.S Luthar’s definition of resilience from other definitions of resilience has been used here since this resonates with the idea of resilience in the book. Nevertheless, the introduction will glance upon the variations formations of resilience in the latter part.

³ Daniel, Supriya. “Conjuring the ghostly storytelling space and subject in select novels from Africa.”

Nevertheless, “‘The Subject’ is an elusive subject” (Strozier 10) even within the Western thought. While tracing the historical construction of “subject”, Robert Strozier delineates the Subject from the already formed, a priori Subject of Aristotle and Kant to Foucault’s discursive subject where power and knowledge network of discourses produces the subject (11).⁴ Arguably, Foucauldian thought catapulted an upheaval in the discussion of “who are we?” that spilt into the discourses of identities and the usual markers of it as gender, race or nation.⁵ One could perhaps even navigate to posthumanism which has compelled new conceptions of the human. However, critics like Sylvia Wynter and Charles W Mills call for a new humanism influenced by Franz Fanon’s humanism.⁶ They critique posthumanism as an alibi for further denial of humanity to the people who were never considered humans (Shu-mei 30).

In this context, it would be beneficial for the very formation of the subject discourse to garner voices from around the world to comprehend the nuances of the concept of the subject.

The aim of this compilation is to interject at this point of the discussion and offer the concept of wandering subject as one of the perspectives that allow an inclusion of a spectrum of voices and experiences and a modality to express the concept of subject in not fixed modes of thought processes.

The term “wandering subject”, itself in the thesis and eventually in this book, is borrowed from Achille Mbembe’s “Life, Sovereignty, and Terror in the Fiction of Amos Tutuola”. His analysis of the beings in the Nigerian author Amos Tutuola’s works reveals that:

there is no body except in and through movement. That is why there is no subject but a wandering one. The wandering subject moves from one place to another. Journey as such does not need a precise destination: the wanderer can go about as he pleases. (17)

⁴ Another compilation on the matter of subject that can aid this discussion is “Who Comes After Subject?” where Gerard Granel examines the different coordinates from which the (Western) subject has been understood. As an expansion of the notion of subject, he suggests that one who comes after the subject would be the one who has not been allowed to emerge as subjects “otherwise than as a people of production” (156), which is the existing mode of formation of the subject.

⁵ The primary thoughts being of Judith Butler or the postcolonial discourses (refer Daniel, Supriya. “Foucault and Postcolonialism: An African Perspective” in the journal Critical Space)

⁶ In Wretched of the Earth, Fanon advocates his brand of humanism, which is multi-layered drawing from Western and African traditions. He argues, “if we want humanity to take one step forward, if we want to take it to another level than the one where Europe has placed it, then we must innovate, we must be pioneers” (238).

The subject that is in constant movement is also a “subject au travail, in the making” (16). The movement is not just the journey without a destination but also the constant change in form and content of the wandering subject.⁷ Deployment of existence for this ever-changing subject can occur only when the subject leans “upon a reservoir of memories and images that are never fixed definitively” (23). The unstable and ever-changing “entity” or the wandering subject must “allow himself [sic] to be carried away by the flux of time and accidents” (23). The subjects produce themselves in the “chain of effects” that do not occur as was foreseen. It is in this flux that the subject invents “himself,” thus negating any sovereignty to the subject.⁸

This book expands this concept of wandering subjects to understand myriad ways of the ever-evolving subject. The spirit of the concept, as elucidated in each chapter, ruminates about the other tangents through which we can comprehend the ever “elusive subject” (Strozier 10) that is in continual formation through struggle that exhibits resilience. Each chapter serves to exhume the concept of the wandering subject in its various nuances, situating the subject in several spaces and times, with emphasis on how acts of resilience are integral to the subject formation. The struggle emanates from the quest of “who we are?” as Foucault seems to suggest, and one could argue that “who we are” emerges from the struggle that one overcomes and in the process of resilience.

In the first chapter, “Women Walking the City: Analysing the Wandering Subject in Amrita Mahale’s Milk Teeth”, Namrata Nirmal and Merin Simi Raj elucidate the role of a woman as the flaneur in the city and devices the city through the wanderings of the woman. The wandering in this chapter is the physical mobility and the lack of it through the city, which is dominated by the male gaze. The wandering subject, then, becomes a mode of negotiation through the patriarchal, postcolonial urban space to find a footing, through resilient overtures, for the ones who have been excluded from these spaces.

The wandering subject’s intertwining between the space of wandering is continued in the second chapter, “Home(in)g the Hostland: Provincializing Metropolitan Cities of Refuge in Sethu’s The Saga of Muziris”. The urban space is again invoked but as a refuge for a community. While both the chapters articulate from a postcolonial urban space, this chapter examines this space as a shelter for the migrating Jewish community. The wanderings of the displaced community, as they continue in the city, configure their self and identity in the act of resilience and hope generated in the city that serves as their home.

⁷ Mbembe quotes passages from Tutuola’s novels to show the dismembered bodies and how they get mixed up and entangled.

⁸ Refer Supriya Daniel’s “Conjuring the ghostly storytelling space and subject in select novels from Africa.”

The quest for home emerges in the wanderings of the protagonist in Le Guin's novel to overcome trauma and find home. In the third chapter, "In Search of a Home: A Queer Hero's Quest to Belong", Aleena Achamma Paul argues that the protagonist's mobility, spurred by trauma and the need for belongingness, serves to inspect the act of resilience or heroism leads to the discovery of self of the wandering subject. The chapter draws parallels to historical events and other science fiction to re-affirm that the wandering subject does not just emerge in certain fictional works but is a concept that can be used as a framework to elucidate subject formation.

Continuing with the motif of a journey in a hostile environment from the previous chapter, the fourth chapter, "Carrying the Fire: The Road and Rituals of Resilience in a Dead World", extrapolates the idea of the constant movement of the wandering subject without a destination. The road they travel evokes a sense of the journey itself being the destination. The mobility of the subject is encumbered with the task of upholding optimism in the face of chaos and destruction. The resilience and insistence on being the "good guys" even when the odds are compiled against the subject become the only constant in the wanderings.

Moving on from speculative and dystopian worlds to a postcolonial one, the fifth chapter, "Masi: The Wandering Subject in 'Wake Up Call' in Barbed Wire Fence (2015)", positions the unreliable narrator, Masi, to explore the concept of identity from a marginalized space. The setting and the character of the story selected to illustrate the concept of wandering subject provide ample scope to comprehend the complexity of the wandering subject that arises from "ghostly" figures like Masi who are in spaces where they are considered as non-entities struggling to find citizenship in a nation where they are in the periphery and lost in the process of documentation.

Ijeoma Odoh, in the next chapter, "Construction of Maternal/Womb Space and Her-story in Andrea Levy's Small Island", through a reappropriation of Deleuze and Guattari's concept of the rhizome, excavates the concept of the wandering subject through the women who are forced to migrate—through the routes and connections they undertake to re-form their identities. The identity formation seeps beyond the usual compartmentalization of race, gender, class and nation to foster new connections and render voice to the voiceless in their resilient search for change through migration.

The penultimate chapter, "Resilience as a Form of Contestation in the Poetry of John Clare", breaks away from the journeys of the subject within the text to the subject producing the text. Anindita Chatterjee chronicles the life and work of the poet John Clare as a resilient voice who defied any sense of fixed identities. His poems reflective of his marginalised status, pours the angst of the lack of comprehension of his 'true' self. Perhaps the subject within the text and without, are mirror images of the same self.

The last chapter, "Mise en Abîme: A Strategy that Highlights a Wandering, Fluid Subjectivity in Abdallah Laroui's novel 'Awrāq: Sīrat Idrīs al-dihniyyah'", delves into the novel to discover means of deciphering and portraying the wandering subject. The narrative device of mise en abîme allows us to further dissect the concept of the wandering subject's lack of a fixed definition, as embedded in this concept is the idea of mobility. This traversing is not just through physical spaces but through self and time. The subject, never being constant and always evolving, renders marking its boundaries an impossible and unnecessary task. Subsequently, providing further insights to elucidate the wandering subject.

Works Cited

- Daniel, Supriya. "Foucault and Postcolonialism: An African Perspective." Critical Space, vol. 9, no.2, 2021.
- Derrida, Jacques. "The Law of Genre." Trans. Avital Ronell. Critical Inquiry vol.7, no.1,1980, pp. 55.
- Foucault, Michel. "The Subject and Power". Critical Inquiry vol. 8, no. 4,1982, pp. 777-795.
- Fleming, John, and Robert J Ledogar. "Resilience, an Evolving Concept: A Review of Literature Relevant to Aboriginal Research." Pimatisiwin vol. 6, no.2, 2008, pp.7-23.
- Fanon, Franz. The Wretched of the Earth. Presence Africaine, 1963.
- Granell, Gerard. "Who Comes after the Subject." Eds. Cadava, Eduardo, Peter Connor, and Jean-Luc Nancy. Who Comes after the Subject? New York: Routledge, 1991. 148-57.
- Mbembe, Achille. "Life, Sovereignty, and Terror in the Fiction of Amos Tutuola." Research in African Literatures vol.34, no.4, 2003, pp. 1-26.
- Roos, Henriette. "'The War of the Worlds:' Relocating the Boundaries Between the Human and the Non-Human." Journal of Literary Studies vol.27, no.4, 2011. pp. 50-70.
- Shih, Shu-mei. "Is the Post- in Postsocialism the Post- in Posthumanism?". Social Text vol.30, no.1,2012, pp.27-50.
- Strozier, Robert M. Foucault, Subjectivity, and Identity: Historical Constructions of Subject. Wayne State University Press, 2002.

PAGES MISSING
FROM THIS FREE SAMPLE

Acknowledgements

This book would not have been conceived if it were not for the paper presentation at the African Literature Association Conference (2022), and for Julien Verdeaux from Vernon Press who recognized its potential for the paper to expand to a book. Much appreciation is due to the conveners of the conference, to my fellow panel members and to the publishers. The discussion that ensued from the presentation on that day plays a pivotal role in the formation of the book, with the title itself borrowed from the panel title. Thanks to Anu Kuriakose for readily agreeing to work on this book project and help compile it in the present form. My indebtedness also to my PhD supervisor, S Sharmila, as this book is an extension to the thoughts garnered into my PhD thesis with her prompts and provocation.

As editors, we are grateful to the anonymous reviewers who agreed to peer review the chapters and to the scholars who shared encouraging words after reviewing the book. Thanks to Anirban Bose for lending his creativity for the book cover. Our thanks to the contributors, without whom the book would be non-existent, is immense.

Contributors

Namrata Nirmal: Namrata Nirmal is an External Consultant with the Word Lab at the Indian Institute for Human Settlements (IIHS). She provides editorial support for book publications, academic writing, and grey literature. She is an associate editor of Urbanisation, IIHS's biannual journal published by Sage Publications. Namrata holds an integrated Master's in English Studies, with a minor in Development Studies, from IIT Madras, where she researched the literary representation of women in the city with a focus on Indian English fiction.

Merin Simi Raj: Merin Simi Raj is an Associate Professor (English) in the Department of Humanities and Social Sciences at IIT Madras. She is the faculty coordinator of the Centre for Memory Studies and the co-founder and chairperson of the Indian Network for Memory Studies (INMS), the first national network in Asia under the aegis of the International Memory Studies Association (MSA). She researches in memory studies, historiography and modernity studies, Anglo-Indian studies, and digital humanities. She co-edited the volume Anglo-Indian Identities: Past and Present, in India and the Diaspora (Palgrave Macmillan, 2021) and is currently co-editing the Brill Indian Handbook for Memory Studies.

Jintu Alias: Jintu Alias is an institute fellow (PhD) in the Department of Literature and Languages at SRM University, Andhra Pradesh, India. Her research revolves around the representation of Kochi and its cosmopolitanism in fiction. Some of her work has been published in Cultural Geographies, Journal of Postcolonial Writing and Modern Jewish Studies.

Aleena Achamma Paul: Aleena Achamma Paul is a Doctoral Scholar in English in the Department of Humanities and Social Sciences at IIT Ropar, India. Her research interests include contemporary American literature, science fiction, queer theory, and gender studies. Her essays have appeared in Literature Compass, among others. ORCID: <https://orcid.org/0000-0003-1555-5511>

Sakti Sekhar Dash: Sakti Sekhar Dash is a Fellow of the Social Science Research Council, Open Association of Research Society, USA. He holds a PhD from Ravenshaw University, India. With a profound interest in literature, history, and culture, he has extensively studied the myths, legends, and folklore of ancient Greece, Egypt, Rome, and India. As a researcher, he loves to revisit and re-examine ancient texts from multiple perspectives. An experienced educator and honorary member of the Illinois Medieval Association, he has served as the editor-in-chief of an international peer-reviewed journal. He has extensively written and published on a diverse range of topics, including modernism, Greek drama, environmental studies, Theatre of the Absurd, and Shakespearean drama.

Jabeen Yasmeen: Jabeen Yasmeen holds a PhD from the Indian Institute of Technology Bombay. Her dissertation was on narrating the Nellie Massacre of 1983. She is a recipient of the 2019 Zubaan-Sasakawa Peace Foundation Grants for Young Researchers from the Northeast. Her areas of interest are Trauma Narratives, Oral History, Storytelling, Partition Studies, Literature on identity and citizenship, and literature from Northeast India.

Ijeoma Odoh: Dr. Ijeoma D. Odoh has been a Lecturer at Princeton University, New Jersey, USA since September 2011. She has also been teaching part-time at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, since September 2022. She completed her doctoral program in English Studies at Howard University, Washington DC, in May 2018. Her dissertation explores post-war migration and 20th-21st Century Black British Women's Literature. Prior to joining Howard University, she was an Assistant Lecturer at the Directorate of General Studies, Federal University of Technology, Owerri Imo State, Nigeria. She was also a Research Associate at Five College Women's Studies Research Center, Mount Holyoke College South Hadley MA (2009-2010), and a Visiting Scholar at the African Studies Department, Michigan State University, East Lansing (2010-2011). Her research focuses on Postwar Migration and Diaspora Studies, Black British Women's Writing, Women's and Gender Studies, African Literature, Postcolonial Literature, and her theory on Rhizomatic Womb-Space.

Anindita Chatterjee: Dr Anindita Chatterjee is an Associate Professor and Head of the Department of English, Durgapur Government College, West Bengal. She did a PhD on "John Clare: Poetry of Madness" from Jadavpur University. She also completed two Minor Research Projects, one on Representation of 'modern' India in the Fictions of Chetan Bhagat (funded by UGC) and the other, "Sari Story: Dressing the Indian Woman through History, 'Tracing the Origin, Growth and Evolution of the Traditional Indian Wear'" (funded by ICSSR). She has co-edited Re-theorising the Indian Subcontinental Diaspora: Old and New Directions (CSP: 2020) and Covid-19 in India, Disease, Health and Culture (Routledge: 2022). She has published a book chapter in Indian Feminist Ecocriticism (Lexington Books, 2022), Modernist Transitions (Bloomsbury, 2023), Desertscapes in the Global South and Beyond: Anthropocene Naturecultures (Routledge, 2023) and articles in Textile- Cloth and Culture (Taylor and Francis) and Contemporary Review of the Middle East (Sage). She has guest edited an Issue of Café Dissensus on '(Re)storying Indian Handloom Saree Culture' (Issue 68: April 2023). Her areas of interest include Nineteenth-Century British Literature, Gender Studies and Popular Culture. She is currently authoring a book on sari-sutra. ORCID: <https://orcid.org/00-0003-1244-5544>)

Anouar El Younssi: Dr Anouar El Younssi is an Assistant Professor of Arabic and Middle Eastern Studies at Oxford College of Emory University in the US. He holds a BA in English Literature and Linguistics, an MA in English, and a PhD in Comparative Literature. His scholarly work explores the wave of literary innovation in modern Arabic literatures, with a focus on Morocco and the Maghreb region.

Index

A

Achille Mbebe, v
Ancient Greek, 78, 79, 80, 81, 83, 93 anthropocentric, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48
anthropocentrism, 44, 47, 48
Arab, 110, 111, 115, 117, 118, 119, 122, 123
Arabic, 109, 110, 111, 123, 129
Assam, 55, 56, 58, 62, 65, 66
asylum, 101, 105, 106, 107

B

bad guys, 41, 42, 43, 45, 49, 50, 51, 52 bell hooks, 82
belonging, 5, 9, 16, 29, 37, 55, 57, 58, 59, 61, 62, 63, 101, 109
Bloom, 54, 102
Blythe, 95, 98, 107

C

Cachar, 58
cannibals, 41, 44, 47
catastrophe, 43, 44, 45, 47
Citizenship Amendment Act, 2019, 55, 62
civilization, 41, 43, 44, 48, 49, 52, 110
Cochin, 15, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 27
colonial, 110
colonization in reverse, 69, 72, 73, 88 colony, 4, 19, 120

Cormac McCarthy, 34, 41, 42, 43, 47, 50, 53, 54
cosmopolitanism, 3, 17, 18, 19, 22, 23, 24, 127
Craig Gurney, 35
cultural imperialism, 115
Cultural Revolution, 29, 30, 38

D

death, 3, 23, 31, 35, 42, 43, 44, 45, 48, 52, 102, 115, 116, 117, 119, 120 diasporic subjects, 74 documentation, viii, 56, 57, 61
Don Juan, 106, 107, 108

E

ecology, 41, 42, 45, 47, 52
Edward Soja, 81
Empire Windrush, 68, 72, 74
enclosure laws, 95, 96, 101, 104
Europe, vi, 19, 21, 25, 111 everyday, 1, 2, 4, 6, 8, 12 exile, 15, 16, 23, 25, 36, 120

F

failure, 30, 106, 111, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121
faith, 42, 45, 47, 49, 50, 51
Fire, 41, 42, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53
flâneur, 1, 2, 5, 6, 9
flâneuse, 6, 9, 10
fragmentation, 113, 114
France, 109, 110, 111, 116, 119, 120

French, 4, 96, 110, 111, 116, 119, 120, 121

French Revolution, 96

G

gender, vi, viii, 1, 2, 5, 6, 7, 9, 29, 34, 97, 127

God, 42, 45, 46, 47, 49, 50, 52, 53, 105

good guys, 41, 42, 43, 45, 49, 50, 51, 52

Great Leap Forward, 29, 30, 38

H

Helpston, 95, 98, 100, 104, 107

Her story, 88

heroism, viii, 29, 31, 32, 37

her-story, 87

Hippocrates, 79, 80

home, viii, 3, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 11, 23, 29, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 95, 96, 100, 101, 102, 104

homeland, 21, 23, 24, 57, 58, 59, 60, 63, 64, 65, 120

Homi Bhabha, 81, 85

hospitality, 15, 16, 17, 18, 21, 22, 24

hostlands, 15

I

"I Am", 104, 105, 106

identity, v, viii, 3, 9, 16, 24, 30, 33, 34, 36, 55, 56, 57, 60, 61, 62, 65,
68, 78, 93, 95, 96, 98, 99, 100,
101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107,
109, 111, 114, 115, 118, 119, 128

Idrīs, ix, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113,
114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120,
121, 122, 123

Indian Ocean, 19, 26

J

Jewish Diaspora, 16

Jews, 16, 17, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27

John Clare by Himself, 100

K

Kerala, 16, 19, 20, 21, 23, 26, 27

L

land, 42, 43, 44, 45, 47, 48, 49, 52

Landscape, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 47, 48, 49, 53

Laroui, ix, 109, 110, 111, 112, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 120, 123

liminal space, 87, 90 loss, 22, 33, 35, 36, 41, 42, 43, 45, 46, 47, 52, 53, 101, 105, 107, 112,

117, 118, 122

M

man, 41, 42, 43, 46, 47, 48, 50, 52, 53

Marcel Proust, 121

Masi, viii, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65

Maureen Murdock, 33

meta-fictional, 116

metropolis, 10, 17, 18, 24

metropolitan cities, vii, 15, 17, 18 migrant, 22

migration, 15, 16, 21, 23, 24, 36, 68, 72, 101, 128

Milk Teeth, vii, 1, 3, 7, 10, 11, 12, 13 mirror, ix, 100, 111, 114, 116, 122

mirroring, 112, 116, 119, 120, 122

Mise en Abîme, ix, 109

mobility, v, vii, viii, ix, 1, 2, 7, 12, 19

modernity, 3, 5, 6, 19, 31, 37, 111, 115, 127
moral, 41, 42, 43, 45, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53 morality, 43, 45, 47, 49
Moroccan, 109, 110, 111, 114, 117, 118, 119, 120
Mumbai, 3, 6, 7, 8, 9, 13, 18, 26, 27
Muziris, vii, 15, 16, 20, 21, 23, 25, 26

N

National Register of Citizens, 55, 62
nature, 4, 9, 12, 33, 36, 42, 43, 45, 47, 48, 49, 98, 100, 112, 114
new world, 81, 84, 86, 90, 91

P

Paris, 6, 12, 13, 17, 26, 109, 111, 119, 120
Plato, 79, 80
post-apocalyptic, 41, 43, 44, 47, 50
postcolonial city, 4, 5, 12, 18
Prelude, 100
provincial, 15, 18, 24
provincializing, 15, 18, 25
public space, 7, 10, 11

Q

Quest, viii, 29, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 53

R

Rabat, 121
refugee, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 24
resilience, v, viii, ix, 16, 17, 19, 24, 25, 26, 27, 95
rhizomatic womb-space, 67, 70, 72, 78, 80, 81, 83, 88, 92
rhizome, 67, 78, 81, 92

Rippingale, 106

S

science fiction, viii, 31, 32, 39, 127 self, v, viii, ix, 16, 29, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 41, 49, 95, 96, 98, 99, 100,
101, 102, 104, 105, 107, 111, 113,
114, 118, 122
South, 4, 13, 25, 26, 27, 42, 44, 48, 128
Spanish, 111
Subject, vi, vii, viii, ix, 1, 2, 16, 110
Subjectivity, ix, 109, 110
Survival, 27, 41, 42, 43, 45, 48, 49, 50, 51
synagogue, 21, 22

T

telling, 3, 29, 30, 31, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 116
thick multiculturalism, 71 thin multiculturalism, 70, 71 third space, 81, 82, 83, 86
Thirding-as-Othering, 82
trauma, viii, 23, 29, 31, 32, 33, 37, 101, 106
travel, viii, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 37, 38, 39

U

unhomely women, 6, 10, 11
urban spaces, 1, 2, 5, 7
Ursula K. Le Guin, 29, 31, 38, 39

V

Violence, 27, 42, 43, 44, 47, 51, 52, 53

W

- wanderers, 15, 16, 19, 43
wandering, v, vi, vii, viii, ix, 1, 2, 3, 7, 9, 10, 11, 15, 16, 29, 33, 34, 35,
36, 37, 42, 43, 45, 52, 95, 100, 111, 112, 114, 116, 122
- wandering subject, 1, 2, 3, 7, 10, 11, 15, 16, 55
wandering womb, 67, 79, 80, 81
womb space, 67, 78, 80, 81, 83, 90, 91 wounded queer, 34